1. Outline of Embedded Value

When a life insurance company underwrites insurance policies, it would incur a bulk of expenses in the initial year of the policy term. It would realize profits while investing the paid premiums in preparation for the payment of benefits and claims throughout the term of the policies. Because of this business practice, profitability, capital efficiency, corporate value cannot be properly measured with single-year financial statements or ROE.

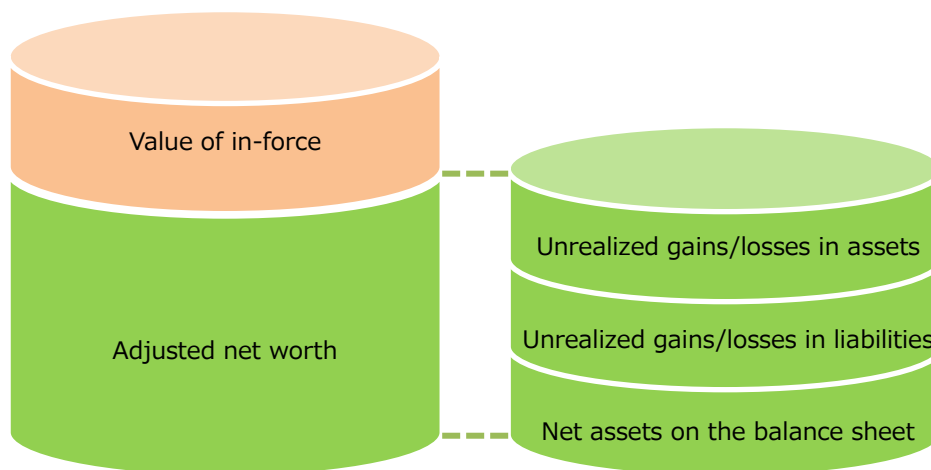

Life insurance companies use Embedded Value (EV) as a measurement of life insurance business. EV is composed of “adjusted net worth”, which represent stock of realized earnings up to date, and “value of in-force business”, which represents expected future earnings from the insurance policies. Since EV recognizes expected earnings throughout the life of the policies at the time of underwriting, it is considered it supplements the statutory accounting profits.

As such, EV is generally considered one of the investment indicators for listed life insurance companies. The Company considers ROEV, a growth of EV adjusted for capital movements and dividends etc., as one of management KPIs representing growth in corporate value and targets an average of 8% growth in medium term.

(Illustrative Chart of Embedded Value)

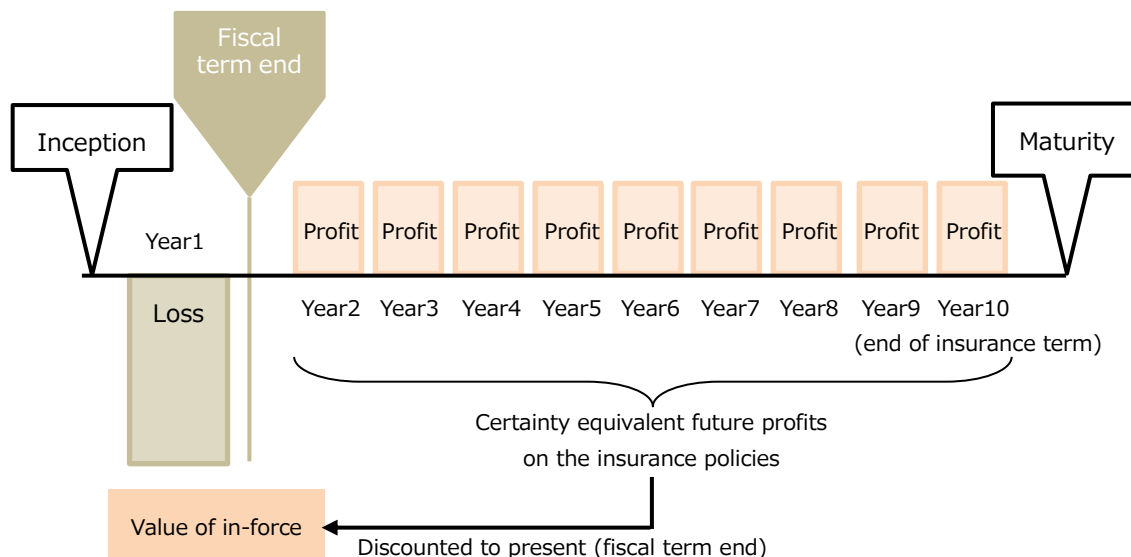

- What is “Adjusted net worth”

Adjusted net worth represents a stock of realized earnings from insurance policies. It is calculated by adjusting the total net assets on the balance sheet for the retained earnings in liabilities, unrealized gains or losses in assets or liabilities not accounted for under the mark to market methodology, etc.

- What is “Value of in-force business”

Value of In-force business represents certainty equivalent present value of future profits on the insurance policies (see chart below).

(Note) The chart above illustrates how a conceptual 10-year level-payment term insurance yields profits and does not represent actual profit and loss.

(Dai-ichi Life Group’s EV and ROEV)

The Company group’s EV at the end of fiscal year 2014 increased by 1 trillion 484.9 billion yen to 5 trillion 779.6 billion yen. While lower interest rates reduced value of in-force business, weaker yen and strong equities prices increased adjusted net worth. The EV also saw an initial consolidation from Protective Life.

ROEV (excluding the impact of the acquisition of Protective Life) for the fiscal year 2014 was 28.8% and for the five years to fiscal 2014 ROEV was on average at 16.1%

	End of FY 2013	End of FY 2014
EV	4,294.7 billion yen	5,779.6 billion yen
	FY 2013	FY 2014	FY 2010 to FY 2014 Five-year average
ROEV	29.4%	28.8%	16.1%

(Note) In calculation of EV, the Company group has adopted the European Embedded Value Principles or EEV Principles. The EEV Principles and related guidance were published in May 2004 by the CFO Forum, an organization comprising the chief financial officers of Europe’s leading insurers in order to improve consistency and transparency in EV reporting.

2. Establishment of the Corporate Governance Policy

The Company established and released the “Corporate Governance Policy” on June 1, 2015, which is based on the idea of the Japan’s Corporate Governance Code.

In the Corporate Governance Policy, policies regarding “Corporate Governance System and the Duties of the Board of Directors, etc”, “Securing the Rights and Equal Treatment of Shareholders”, “Dialogue with Shareholders” and “Cooperation with Stakeholders” are written.

The Company shall develop a system of corporate governance to ensure transparent, fair, prompt and bold decision-making while balancing the ownership and management, in order to discharge responsibility to its multi-stakeholders such as customers, shareholders, society and employees, and to achieve sustainable growth and enhancement of corporate value over the mid-to long term.

You can find the details about the Corporate Governance Policy at the Company’s website.
